The secret of good packing is not in big blocks, but in getting the blocks close together. Hence the blocks should be cut carefully, that their sldes may be straight; otherwise there can not be a good fit. Any crevices should be filled with crus'ied ice. If the weather is quite cold, pour water over the ice until the crevices are full; in this way the contents of the house may be frezen into one solid mass. This will keep better, not on account of the size of the blocks, to be occupied by air. When the house is filled, cover the top of the ice with a layer of sawdust a foot thick, tramped down well, or a layer of hay two feet thick. The ree is built up only as high

Nearly every person has his own way of cutting ice. This is my way, with out special tools: We get a board, twelve feet long and two feet wide. Take the 'shad-bellied' cross-cut saw and kneeling on the board, say into the ice two inches deep alo g both edges of the board. The board is then slid along the proper space, twice its own width, which it measures on the ice, and the saw is again used. Crosscuts are made in the same way. By this and plenty of every plan we get all our outs straight, and the blocks of the same size-no mean points in proper packing. Unless the loc is very thick, it can be separated. This house is along these cuts, or seams, by an axe (broad axe is best) or even a spade For towing the blocks ashere a stout garden rake answers well; or for a few cents a blacksmith will make a hook Is no snow-the ground is frozen. Almost any of the harder varie les of wood will answer, but those chiefly found and used by this company, I the region it now occupies, are birch beech and maple. Pine, liemlock and soft woods will not answer. The general operations and products of the company are as follows: Contracts are made with the neighboring farmers for the purchase of standing wood, on which an agreed amount is paid in advance, balance payable as fast as the wood is cut be the company. The wood is delivere at the works in ordinary four-for lengths and is then piled in the distilling retorts, of which there are in the Cadosia still-hous twenty-four pairs. These retori consist of east iron, somewhat in the form of a steam boiler, about ten fee long and four and o e-half feet in d amoter, having a large manhole in one other end.
